

February in your garden

Keep up the water to the plants, watering in the cool of the night or morning. Mulch where you can.

Now is the time to plant vegetables for winter harvesting.

Look out for fruit fly – if your fruit fly traps are full, you may need to spray your fruit trees with Lebaycide.

Lightly prune your roses and give them a good feed of rose fertiliser to produce more flowers for Autumn.

Vegetable Seeds:

Cabbage, cauliflower, broccoli & Brussels sprouts. They need soil containing plenty of compost and well rotted animal manure, also a light dressing of lime before planting. Soon as the plants are growing, give a regular feed of liquid fertilizer or weak tea from chicken manure or cow manure that have soaked in a bin full of water.

Seeds of carrot, parsnip, celery, kohlrabi, lettuce, parsley, radish & turnip can also be sown.

Flowers:

You can plant now for winter flowering seedlings of pansy, viola, stocks, poppies & alyssum. Also calendula, carnation, polyanthus, larkspur, linaria, snapdragon, statice & verbena.

Bulbs:

Bulbs for spring flowering can be planted now. Tulip bulbs need to be placed in your vegetable crisper in your fridge for 1 month prior to planting.

You can grow bulbs that flower in late Summer & early Autumn – lillium, dahlia, naked lady, pineapple lily & crocus.

Blood lilies (haemanthus, Scadoxus spp.) so called for their blood red flowers, also flower on bare stems.

Naked ladies (amaryllis belladonna) put up a long stem and flower, and then produce the leaves. Naked ladies may survive in an old garden long after other plants have died. When planting naked ladies, which have a bulb as big as a large potato, select a sunny spot with well drained soil. This goes for all the bulbs.

Jacobean lilies (sprekelia formossissima) usually flower with their leaves in Summer.

Pineapple lily (eucomis autumnal) is a tall striking Summer flowering bulb suitable for a range of climates. Pineapple-like tufts grow on top of each column of flowers.

Stems can grow from 30cm to almost 1m tall, and have many star-shaped white, pale yellow, green or purple flowers clustered up a stout stem. The flowers appear at the same time as the green wavy-edged leaves.

Dahlias should be producing buds now and flowering from February to March. They may need more tying up the stakes as they grow. They like a well drained spot; feed now to help the growing flowers. #Dahlia tubers contain a sugar called Atlantic Starch; and prior to the discovery of insulin, this sugar was given to diabetics to help them metabolise carbohydrates.

Black Spot Fungicide

Place one litre of full cream or the equivalent of powdered milk in a mixing bowl. Add one teaspoon of bicarbonate soda and one litre of water. Add a pinch of Condy's Crystals and mix. Use diluted as a spray.

New technology helps fight old enemy in Tablelands LHPA

Remote camera technology is helping the Tablelands LHPA rangers in their efforts to protect local livestock from wild dog attacks.

With camera technology now more affordable and sophisticated than ever, a new generation of rangers are using remote digital cameras to assist them trapping wild dogs, combined with the traditional skills and cunning used by dog trappers.

Goulburn-based Tablelands LHPA ranger Grant Eccles says he is already seeing the benefits of the camera technology after setting up a motion activated camera on a property which had experienced wild dog attacks on livestock.

“We were able to determine that two dogs were involved in the sheep slaughter, that they were crossbred dogs with similar markings (most likely litter mates), and over several days the camera recorded the dogs using a regular path,” Mr Eccles said.

“In the past, we would have baited a large area around the killing location and assumed our job was done when the baits were taken with dog footprints nearby.

“In this case, however, the camera recorded the bait being taken by a fox, with the dog prints left during a cursory inspection of the bait station – so we knew we had to change our strategy to trap the wild dogs.

At the northern end of the district Josh Parr, Tablelands LHPA ranger based in Bathurst, has used the digital cameras to locate a breeding pair of wild dogs with eight pups.

“If you rush in when the first young dog is sighted without assessing the whole situation, you risk dispersing the dogs,” Mr Parr explained.

“The camera findings lead to a better planned and coordinated operation, which in this instance allowed us to completely eliminate the problem.”

LHPA rangers in all areas are keen to work with landholders to combat wild dog problems. Landholders are urged to report any wild dog attacks or sightings to their local LHPA office.

Targeted pig control success in Tablelands LHPA

Feral pig numbers have been reduced across 10,000 hectares of private land east of Taralga as part of a strategic control program in the Tablelands Livestock Health and Pest Authority.

The control project was a joint effort between the Tablelands LHPA, the Hawkesbury Nepean Catchment Management Authority and 20 landholders on properties between Bannaby and the Wombeyan Caves.

Tablelands LHPA ranger, Grant Eccles says that while the project involved controlling all feral animals in the region, feral pigs were the main target.

“As this area has a relatively low pig population, the aim of the control work was to ensure we maintain the low-density numbers, as pig populations have the potential to double in a year,” Mr Eccles said.

“The project accounted for 27 feral pigs over the past six months, most of which were trapped using grain for bait. This will result in reducing the pig population and interrupting their breeding cycle, which will minimise their impact on primary production and conservation areas.

“We also employed the use of a contract trapper who caught six wild dogs in the Taralga and Wombeyan Caves region.”

Mr Eccles says there were enormous benefits in taking a coordinated approach to controlling pest animals. “Rangers, CMA officers and landholders worked together to implement consistent and widespread pest animal control in the Taralga area, which is the best approach for both control and cost effectiveness,” Mr Eccles said.

“The cooperation of the 20 local landholders was vital to the success of the project – we wouldn’t have been able to run the project without their support and involvement.

“While it is ultimately all landholders’ responsibility to control pest animals on their land, the LHPA assisted landholder efforts by working with the Hawkesbury Nepean CMA to source additional funding and resources to implement a wider control program.”

Hawkesbury Nepean CMA catchment coordinator, Aaron Smith says the reduction in feral pig and wild dog numbers in these areas will greatly benefit the biodiversity of the region, as well as local landholders and the broader community.

“Pigs are highly destructive animals, they trample and uproot wetlands and soils, feed on crops and pasture and they damage farm infrastructure including fences and dams. They also carry diseases which threaten both native and farm animals,” Mr Smith said.
